

EMERGING MARKETS IN 2025: A CONTRARIAN APPROACH

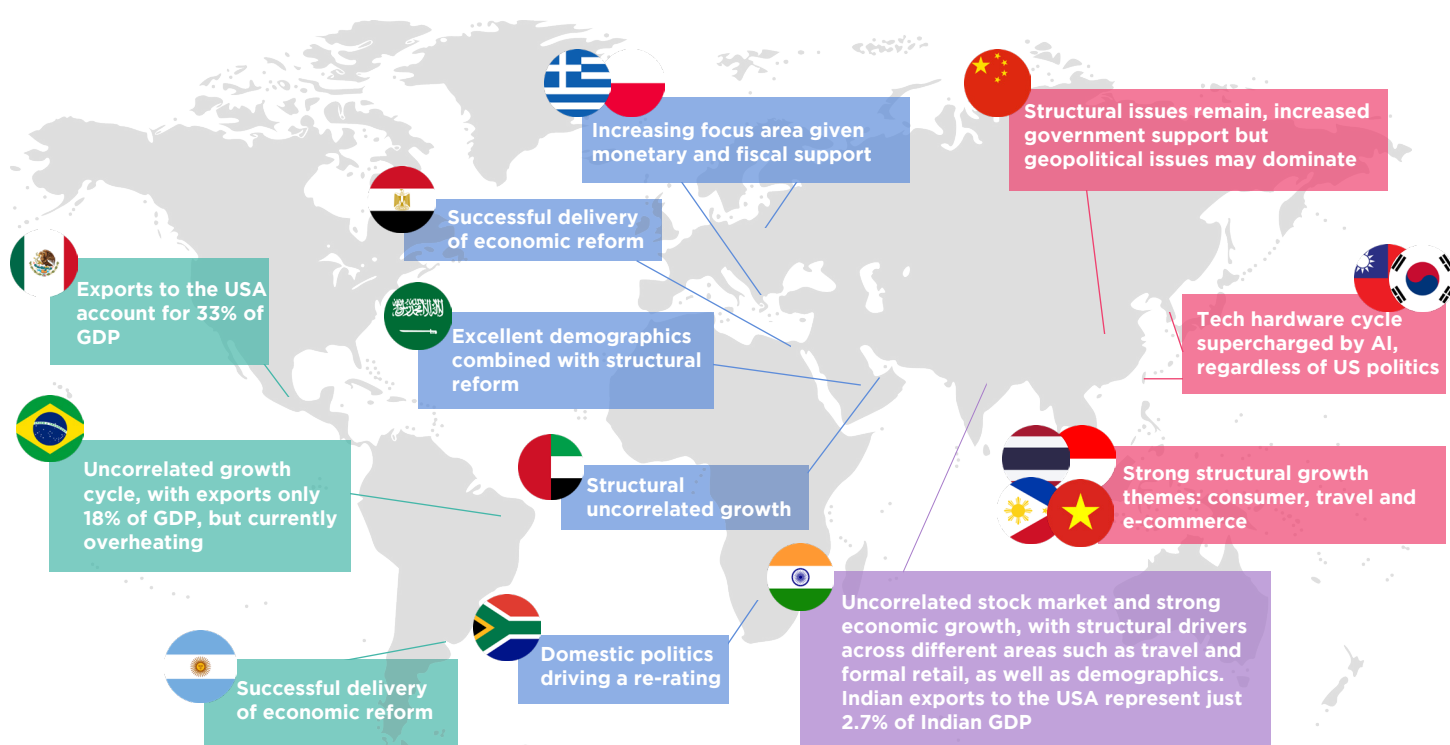

We expect domestic structural growth, non-traditional markets and AI beneficiaries will drive the portfolio

- 1 A DOMESTIC GROWTH PLAY: Our portfolio is focused on beneficiaries of domestic structural growth (e.g. demographics, e-commerce, travel). 66 out of 78 of our names are domestically driven.
- 2 RESILIENT GLOBAL WINNERS: We only invest in exporters with a sustainable competitive advantage, even after any new trade barriers, such as semiconductor manufacturers and beneficiaries of the AI revolution.
- 3 DIVERSIFIED: The Future World Fund captures secular growth tailwinds across approximately 20 countries, mitigating country-specific economic and political risks.
- 4 ACCELERATING GDP GROWTH: Expected for certain markets, such as Saudi Arabia and South Africa. Periphery Europe (Greece, Poland) is expected to grow at 2-3x the rate of the Eurozone. Asian markets, such as Indonesia, India and the Philippines, are expected to still grow at 5%+.
- 5 VALUATIONS AT HISTORICAL LOWS: Emerging Markets have never been this cheap versus Developed Markets.

Quality growth

We focus on attractively valued, quality businesses with sustainable competitive advantages, offering faster earnings growth and greater profitability than the EM index (Figure 3).
